

Dizzy New Heights for Davis 14th May 2006

Stefan Davis abseiling down 230ft Canary Wharf building

Stefan Davis and Co-Driver Pat Cooper contested the Pirelli National Rally this Sunday the 2nd round of the Peugeot 205 Scholarship car.

Stefan reached dizzy new heights the day before the rally by warming up the adrenalin glands on a 230 foot abseil down an office block in Canary Wharf for Cancer Research. With the abseil successfully completed the team set off on the 400 mile trek to Cumbria.

The crew got off to the a flying start setting fastest time in the Scholarship some 6 seconds clear of their closest rival though unfortunately not the Flying Fiestas so the hope of big prize money looked unlikely.

Stage 2 became the victim of a stage closure and unfortunately for the crew the closure occurred before they got their run whilst the other 205 leaders had a run at the stage. Stefan had to wait an hour whilst they were re-routed to the next stage. "We was flowing well, then suddenly we ended up with like a near on 2 hour gap before driving again whilst the other crews ploughed on through business as usual, it makes it hard work when you lose your flow" said Pat.

The crew went on to set fastest time again on Stage 4 and just 0.2 seconds separated the top 2 on the final spectator stage. "We really had our hearts set on winning this one, and we got off to the perfect start. To be honest I think it's always nice to come out of Killer Keilder unscaved has it claims so many victims each year. We have a lot more pace to come and we are still adjusting to each other at the moment, guess we will just have to wait until round 3 in Wales." Said Stefan.
